The following pages represent a small selection of information available in "Islam: America's Trojan Horse" by Don Boys, Ph.D. The full text is available by e-mail for $7.00. The book, to be published this Fall, will have five additional chapters. Please note that endnotes have not been provided in this abridged edition.

Foreword

Watch out for Snakes!

There are over 1300 Muslim mosques in America with others planned. In fact, Muslims plan to conquer America. Well, that's not exactly true; they plan to take over the world! And that statement is easily proved, as you will soon see. We are facing the greatest challenge to our nation that we have ever faced. That includes the War Between the States (or as some call it, "Lincoln's War of Northern Aggression") and our 70 year conflict with Communism. The enemy is already among us: Muslim extremists.

For those who think I am too hard, harsh, and even hateful, I have a question: what if terrorists drop a nuclear bomb over one of our major cities resulting in the deaths of 100,000 Americans from the blast with another 300,000 dying of radiation; plunging the stock market to the basement; devastating our economy for a generation; putting millions of people out of work; producing fear and anxiety up and down every street in the nation; would you still think me to be too harsh? Many national leaders think the above could happen, or maybe millions infected with a biological or chemical weapon.

Every Muslim is not a terrorist and all Muslims do not encourage terrorism, but a large number of them do. They were trained that way from infancy. There is a Trojan Horse already within our walls. Muslim extremists are the ones that I am concerned about, not those Muslims who are peaceful, kind, law-abiding, and lovers of freedom.

Homer told of the tragedy of Troy in the legend, The Odyssey. Troy was taken by stealth, not sword and America may be taken the same way if the Muslims persist and Americans drift off to sleep watching "I love Lucy" for the 17th time.

Troy was a magnificent city with high, thick walls and massive gates ably defended by the most courageous soldiers. They were sure their city would live forever, somewhat like super-confident Americans believe.

Paris, a Trojan prince, stole Helen, the world's most beautiful woman away from her husband, Menelaus, a king of the Greeks. For two years the Greeks prepared for war; and, with Ulysses, they set sail in a thousand ships to avenge the King's honor.

The battle lasted for nine years and numerous heroes were slain on both sides. Finally, Ulysses contrived a plan to take the city; this plan required brains, not battles. He instructed his men to build a huge wooden horse that would hold a hundred men. One night, he and his armed men climbed into the horse, and the cleverly concealed door was closed.

That night, the Greeks boarded their ships and sailed away; the last of them were seen sailing out of sight by the early risers of Troy. But the Greeks only sailed behind a distant island and waited for a time to strike. The next day, not a Greek tent could be seen on the plain, only the wooden horse, with soldiers of death inside. The trap was set. The people of Troy were elated with their "victory" and were enthralled with the token of victory, the wooden horse. Some wanted to take it into the city as a war trophy, while others were afraid of it.

Laocoon, the priest, loudly warned against the horse saying, "I fear the Greeks even when they bear gifts." During this time, a Greek soldier, Sinon by name, was found who pretended to be a deserter from the Greeks. Ulysses planned that Sinon should convince the people to take the horse inside the city. Sinon told them that Troy would never be destroyed if the horse were inside its walls. He also promised the favor and protection of the goddess, Athene. With the horse, they would have happiness and prosperity forever. (Sound familiar? "We must learn to accept everyone's religion and culture as equal to ours; it is narrow and bigoted to think otherwise. Why, what would world opinion be if we thought America should always be first in our minds?")

Again, the priest warned, "beware, beware of the treacherous Greek. Cast the horse into the sea, or burn it, for it will bring you only misery and ruin." Obviously, the priest was prejudiced and bigoted, a nationalist who wrapped himself in the Trojan flag yelling, "Troy first!" The Liberals in the government were probably already planning to send foreign aid to the Greeks to "shore up world opinion," and to show that the Trojans were willing to "forgive and forget" to maintain world peace (and profitable trade with the Greeks).

The militant priest (who was a member of the New Right?) frustratingly, although bravely, threw his spear at the wooden horse, resulting in a "hollow" clang of the armor. But alas, the brave priest was not long for this world, for out of the sea slithered two immense serpents with eyes and tongues flashing flames of fire. They snaked through the terrified crowd, oblivious to everyone except the priest and his two right-wing sons. To the horror and delight of the crowd, the serpents entwined the priest and his sons and crushed them to death—their conservative, obstructionist voices stilled forever. The serpents, their job done, slithered through the crowd and back into the sea.

Of course, uninformed people, following the hysterical cries of liberal leaders, interpreted the episode as a vindication of their permissive philosophy and demanded that the horse be brought into the city, ere they get a federal judge to require it. And so it was done. They even tore down a portion of their defense system, their walls, to get the horse into the city, but after all, they were now safe. Had not the authorities told them so?

For the first time in nine years, the city was unguarded, but there was no need to spend money on defense. (Spend it on illegal immigrants instead?) While the unguarded city slept, Sinon released Ulysses and his men from the bowels of the horse. A beacon light signaled the Greeks, and soon the streets of Troy were swarming with thousands of enemy soldiers. The Trojans were awakened from their sweet dreams of peace, prosperity, and pleasure by the sounds of battle.

The King was slain, along with his noble soldiers, and while peoples' arms and legs were shackled they watched their proud city on the shores of the Aegean Sea burn to the very foundations. As the Greek ships sailed from the harbor, gorged with all the wealth of the great, grand, and glorious Troy, the people rattled their chains in the stinking ships' holds and remembered the words of their faithful priest: "Beware of the treacherous Greeks.... It will bring you only misery and ruin." Troy was gone forever because the people refused to listen to words of warning.¹

Alas, our nation is being lulled to sleep by leaders whose motto is "America last," and they have permitted a wooden horse to be dragged inside our walls. Is the day coming when our glorious Republic will only be remembered as a "noble experiment" between the great oceans? In kindness we have permitted aliens inside our nation who have no intention of being absorbed into our "melting pot." They believe in the "salad bowl" theory. Muslims will not adopt our ways and be assimilated into our culture. They are determined to change our culture, laws, and religion as they have in England, France, and other nations.

I have cast my spear onto the side of the wooden horse. Those who believe in unlimited immigration and multiculturalism will not cast a spear (except in the direction of Conservatives). They, in fact, tell us to throw down our weapons and to help them drag a strange wooden horse even deeper into our land. Meanwhile, we Christian Conservatives had better watch for snakes in our midst.

Introduction

Stepping on Your Face

Our war with terrorism goes back to the early days of mankind, to the tent of Abraham when he refused to wait for God's promise to provide him a son! At his wife's suggestion, (and in keeping with the pagan practice of Sarai's homeland), Abraham took Hagar to bed rather than wait for God's promise to be fulfilled. The result was the birth of Ishmael who, according to Genesis 16:

12, would become “a wild man; his hand will be against every man....” We have seen that played out in history and in the acts of terror perpetrated by Muslim terrorists in recent years and sadly on September 11, 2001.

Muslims have a legal right to live in America and to practice their religion (even a perverted religion), and they have a right to think that all other religions are wrong. This is America where First Amendment rights are precious to all of us. I don't want to see anyone's rights abused or denied. After all, if it can happen to you, it can happen to me. Muslims and Methodists have a right to believe what they want to believe. If they believe error, then there will be consequences for that error. Of course, they believe the same about me. So be it.

It is interesting that the Muslim countries do not have freedom of speech, religion, assembly, and press; furthermore, their “moderate” leaders in those nations have not demanded such freedom since the September 11 attack on America! Why are all the “moderates” so quiet on this subject?

President Bush told Americans that we are at war. He is correct. It is called jihad: a holy war that all Muslims know they are obligated to support, and that war is against Israel and America.

If I see Muslims (or anyone else) being mistreated, I will come to their defense. No one should be harassed, intimidated, or punished for what he believes. There are many Muslims who are horrified at what happened on September 11. I accept their word that they are sincere. However, out of the estimated 11 million Muslims in America, many do believe in terror and do believe they will go to Paradise as their body bomb goes off or their hijacked plane explodes against a building, killing thousands of “infidels.”

Some of our politicians, preachers, and pundits, are telling us that there are no differences in one religion and the next. One is as good as another. We are told that Islam is a religion of peace. I think those people should stay in their own fields and not try to be theologians. Those people have a right to say what they want; however, I reject many of them, and I am compelled to rebuke them as Paul said in II Timothy 4:2. Christians should be outraged when the pompous pundits equate Allah with the God of the Bible! Since the politicians work for me (I pay their salaries), I demand that they speak the truth or keep quiet on the subject.

I shall be accused of being a hater and bigot, but that doesn't answer my major premise that Islam is a Trojan Horse in America. Muslim clerics will scream at me for being so intolerant; however, I insist that they point out my errors! They will say that I am slandering their religion, but if so, I am “slandering” them with truth and truth is far more important than political correctness.

I would like for some Muslim leader to tell me why he has the right to offend me (with lies) about Christ's deity, death, and resurrection, and I am supposed to sit there and smile like an idiot, but I cannot point out the incredible contradictions, mistakes, and absurd positions taken by followers of the Koran!

America has opened her doors to Arabs and Muslims, and with the good guys have come the scum, and while all Muslims are not terrorists, all the terrorists have been Muslims! Our open doors and acceptance of Muslims have kicked us in the face. They have repaid evil for good.

Chapter One

The Massacre Suicidal Slaves to Islam

It was the best of times; it was the worst of times. History will record that in the summer of 2001 America was in clover. There was high employment, and while the stock market was slipping, no one thought it would hit bottom. Things were looking good for America. We had elected a professing Christian as President who wasn't ashamed of his faith in Christ. All of us received a refund check on our taxes paid with promise of more tax cuts. While there were indications that jobs were going south, we were still the financial power of the earth. And no informed person questioned our military superiority.

Then on September 11, 2001, the world changed forever when 19 Muslim terrorists from Egypt and Saudi Arabia flew two planes into the twin towers of the World Trade Center in Manhattan and one into the Pentagon in Washington with over 3000 deaths ensuing. Another plane was crashed in Pennsylvania before it reached Washington. It is not incidental that those two targets were where the U. S. is perceived the strongest: commerce and military. They hit us where we were the strongest. And they made us bleed.

Americans watched in horror as the two massive towers fell trapping thousands of innocent people inside. There were many acts of courage and some of infamy: police and fire fighters rushed into the burning buildings to save lives and later scabs on society robbed the dead and used stolen credit cards to steal from the dead.

Since the attack many blinded eyes have miraculously received sight concerning incompetent government and irrational religion, but until I'm proved wrong, I still believe most Americans are using a white-tipped cane as they walk the streets. Before the dust and smoke cleared from the attacks, religious leaders stumbled over each other to get to television cameras to absolve Islam from any guilt. In doing so, they displayed political correctness and private cowardice. They will be recognized as cheerleaders for our destruction. Those sickly, smiling clergymen wearing panty hose, silk shorts, lace around their shirts, and sniffing French perfume from frilly handkerchiefs made me ashamed to be an American, let alone a preacher. Most Americans want leaders with hair on their chests, bone in their backs, and a brain in their heads. Many clergymen lack all three. Leaders who are afraid of adverse public opinion and being labeled "conservative" (gasp!) are moral cripples who are not aware of their limp and crooked walk. Such leaders, in crises, are as useless as a milking stool under a bull.

When courageous leaders such as Franklin Graham, Jerry Falwell, Jerry Vines, Pat Robertson, and others. spoke the truth about Islam, unprincipled politicians, preachers, and pundits fled from them like the mythical vampire flees the rising sun. Soft religious leaders are now "building bridges" (of mist) between Christianity and Islam, and the uninformed who cross that "bridge" of mist will fall into a noxious swamp of dismay, disillusionment, and disbelief.

It is astounding that religious leaders would come to the defense of a religion that produced such a massacre of innocent people, but men such as television preacher Robert Schuller did. He even had a Muslim imam (cleric) on his television show! (Schuller is known by many thinking people as (BPA) the Biggest Phony in America.) Another soft, "sensitive," silly preacher is Bill Hybels of Willow Creek Community Church in Illinois, and I think he is President of the League of the Willfully blind! He also had a Muslim leader in his pulpit on October 7, 2001! Faisal Hammouda said, "We believe in Jesus more than you do, in fact." Did Bill correct him with the truth that Muslims do not believe Christ is divine or that he died for our sins? No, Bill Hybels wants everyone to feel warm and fuzzy. Maybe he should try to "build bridges" between Islam and the thousands of widows and orphans of those who died in the September attacks.

Many pundits, politicians, and preachers called the killers cowardly, but they were hardly that. These assassins were dedicated to their cause and their cause was Islam. It does take some courage to follow a plan from which one knows there is no hope of escape. To steer a plane into a building is criminal. It is atrocious; it is hideous, but it is not cowardly. They were sadistic, suicidal slaves to Islam. They were inside America's Trojan Horse.

Neither were the terrorists deranged. It was murder but not madness. They were all educated young men who worked diligently to complete a dastardly task: to murder innocent people and to spread fear down every street, from the hovels of Appalachia to the palatial condominiums of Miami Beach. They succeeded in accomplishing the worst terrorist attack upon America, but it was not, as some have said, the worst terrorist attack in history.

There have been numerous acts of horror perpetrated upon men. In fact, it is one of the great questions of life: how can sane people do such wicked, harmful things to fellow humans? When men don't believe in God, the God of the Bible, they are capable of anything.

Men have committed great atrocities under the guise of politics, government, and religion while others have done so in their own cause, whatever that might be. Communist China (Red China) killed an estimated 60 million of its own people since 1949. Soviet Russia killed about 40 million. Then Hitler slaughtered less than 10 million. (I have never received an answer as to why leftists in the world are indignant and eloquent about Hitler's slaughter but are strangely silent about the genocide in China and the old Soviet Union. Anyone want to try?)

Communists have always used terror as an orchestra leader uses his wand: to get what he wants from his orchestra. Lenin introduced the terror concept as a strategy when he declared that "we can achieve nothing unless we use terror." The Communists became masters of terror throughout the world. Terror could be felt in the streets and back alleys of the Soviet Union.

Chapter Two

The Myths, I Did God Cause the Terrorist Attack?

Some have told us that the Muslim terrorist attack on America was God's judgment upon us for our national sins of abortion, perversion, crime, divorce, etc., so God is to blame for the terror? Others tell us that if God exists He would never bring judgment upon a nation. Still others tell us that God is too puny to intercede on man's behalf or doesn't care what happens to men. What is the fact and what is fallacy? What are some myths being promoted today as they relate to the attack on September 11, and can those myths be dangerous to you and America?

God is never the author of evil, so He did not cause the attack on America. God does permit evil to happen for the present time, but He is never the author of evil. Evil happens because God gave each person a will to decide between right and wrong. When a person chooses wrong, God has "no pleasure" in his wickedness. God will not forbid a person to take the wrong path, and the person is free to do atrocious acts, but of course, at the end of the chosen path is judgment. All of us will be accountable for our decisions.

We know that God does not tempt any person, but men are tempted and led astray by the evil one. Men do evil things, such as killing innocent people, because they are of their father the devil. John 8:44 reveals, "Ye are of your father the devil, and the lusts of your father ye will do. He was a murderer from the beginning, and abode not in the truth, because there is no truth in him. When he speaketh a lie, he speaketh of his own: for he is a liar, and the father of it."

Men take over planes and steer them into buildings because their father (Satan) was a murderer from the beginning. Men do wicked things because they have a wicked heart and out of the heart come the issues of life. Proverbs 4:23 reminds us: "Keep thy heart with all diligence; for out of it are the issues of life." These lost, depraved Muslims are only doing the work of their father. They, like you and me, do evil because they think evil, and they think evil because they are evil. Proverbs 23:7, "For as he thinketh in his heart, so is he."

My talk show opponents have said that God does not exist or if He does, he is a puny, impotent God not deserving of worship and obedience. After all, an all powerful, all knowing, and all loving God would never permit babies to be born blind, crippled, or dead or permit millions to starve in slum conditions. However, they are wrong and Darwin, Voltaire, and thousands of others have gone down with that ship. They indicted God when He was not guilty.

Yes, God knew that terrorists were going to kill thousands of innocent people, but He did not create men to be puppets. We each have the ability to choose. The Muslim terrorists chose death for themselves and others. That was not God's choice. God loves mankind, but loving requires a choice or it isn't love. True love, human or divine, can never be forced. Who would want a love that was coerced, even if possible? When we have a choice, it can not simply be a choice of good. Evil must be an option. The terrorists chose evil. John 3:19 tells us: "And this is the condemnation, that light is come into the world, and men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil."

God could have created us as puppets or robots, but since we were created for fellowship with a sovereign God we must have the ability to refuse love and fellowship. Puppets and robots cannot know love or fellowship, so the will to do wrong must be as equally available as the will to do right. Terrorists choose to do wrong and to fault a sovereign God for man's decision to do evil is unfair, unreasonable, and unscriptural.

The many laws of nature were established and men must live by those laws. If a person jumps or falls from a building, he will fall because the law of gravity demands it. God is not to be blamed. We are all aware of the possibility of falling, so we are careful when we are at high places. God could follow every person around and keep him from falling when he stumps his toe, but that was not part of the original plan. We are free to fall and fail.

What kind of existence would we have if we were forced to love, give, and obey, and if there were no possibility of doing wrong because we had been created as fleshly robots? If we never made a mistake? If we always did the right thing because it was impossible to do the wrong thing? We would love God because it would be impossible not to love Him? God chose not to design us that way. He gave us a will to choose, and He longs to have us choose to love and fellowship with Him.

No, God did not stop the terrorist attacks, not because He wanted them to occur, but because men chose that way in their sinful condition. So, if something or someone much higher than himself does not guide man, then he will often do wrong and will be held accountable.

If a person is a Muslim, he will act like a Muslim and follow the tenets of the Koran and the Hadith. It will not be surprising if that person is violent. If a person is a Christian, he will follow, to a degree, the principles of the Bible. He will realize that he is a new creature in Christ and is expected to live Christ-like. He will want to do right and not wrong. He will want to love and not hate. He will want to give rather than take. He will want to forgive rather than hold a grudge.

Our society is not Christian but it has been "Christianized." Men have an imperfect view of the Bible, self, Christ, life, death, etc., but there are flashes, from time to time, of awesome Bible truth and Christian living. Muslims have little conception of Bible principles and Godly living. That is why many Muslims are not appalled at beheadings, chopping off limbs, yanking out tongues, and prying out eyes. They have known that as standard operating procedure, so they shrug their shoulders and walk away.

So it is a myth to think that God caused the terrorist attack; or that He was too weak to do anything about it; or that if He exists, he would have forbidden it to happen.

Another myth is that one religion is as good as another. All are equal. What they really mean is that truth doesn't matter, and in fact, religion doesn't matter. Follow any religion you want and if you are sincere, then truth is totally irrelevant. That sounds so tolerant, so broadminded, and so kind; however, it is untrue. If there is a sovereign God (and there is) then He is concerned with truth, and wants His creatures to know the truth. He surely does not want us to be involved with error. Truth sets us free. It's God's heaven and He can tell us the prerequisite to enter.

Chapter Three

The Myths, II Mythmakers are Mythtakers!

Since the terrorist attacks on America, especially on September 11, there have risen some myths about God and His dealing with men. Some tell us that if God really exists, He would not permit such tragedies to occur. Others tell us that God did it. Then still another myth is that God does not use such events to bring a nation to repentance. The mythmakers are mythtakers.

The Bible and history are replete with examples of the judgment of God upon the various nations, and if so, can America expect to escape? It is a fact, not a myth, that other nations have not escaped His judgment as a cursory examination of early civilizations will show.

There were two impressive (for that day) centers of early civilization in mankind's history: Ur and Babylon. Civilization moved from Ur, (located 200 miles north of the Persian Gulf) and Babylon (located between the Tigris and Euphrates Rivers) to Judea and to Nineveh, respectively, and eventually to Egypt, Greece, and Rome.

Thousands of miles of the Tigris and Euphrates Rivers permitted farmers along their banks to produce prodigious amounts of produce and provided the avenues of commerce for most of the Fertile Crescent. It became the garden and granary of western Asia.

During the time of Abraham, the Sumerian city of Ur was a center for trade from the Persian Gulf as ships sailed up the Euphrates bringing gold, copper ore, ivory, hardwoods, and other items from Egypt, India, and Ethiopia. Excavations of Ur have proved that it was settled at least 3,000 years B.C. and had developed "a high culture."¹ Intricate and impressive carvings, pottery, and gold headdresses have been uncovered in the Royal Cemetery. Graves were discovered that contained wealthy occupants each holding a heavy gold cup to his mouth. In time, Ur was eclipsed by other city-states, as power shifted from place to place.

Standing on the sandy shores of the Euphrates amid the wastes of ancient Babylon (known as Babel in Genesis 10:10, and ruled by Nimrod), one would never imagine that there stood the epitome of civilization 700 years before Christ! The various settlements and cities were unified and became Babylonia with headquarters in Babylon.

Hammurabi united lower Mesopotamia with its capital in Babylon, and he changed it from an insignificant river-town to the capital of an empire. He ruled for 43 years (dying in 1686 B.C) and introduced his famous code, said to be given by the Sun god himself.

Babylon reached its zenith under the 43 year reign of Nebuchadnezzar. Soon Babylon controlled all the trade in western Asia, and with the additional funds Nebuchadnezzar built a magnificent city. Daniel quoted him as saying, "Is not this the great Babylon that I built?"² Herodotus visited Babylon about 150 years after Nebuchadnezzar died, describing it as standing in a spacious plain and surrounded by a wall 56 miles in length that enclosed an area of 200 square miles. He said that a four-horse chariot could be driven along the top.

The Euphrates, lined with stately palms, ran through the center of town and was spanned by a bridge that permitted its citizens to live on both sides of the river. The city was built of brick faced with yellow, blue, and white enameled tiles, most of which were emblazoned with, "I am Nebuchadnezzar, King of Babylon."³

The most impressive sight when approaching the city was a 650-foot ziggurat that was "probably the Tower of Babel."⁴ Six hundred yards north of Babel was one of Nebuchadnezzar's palaces and the Hanging Gardens that he had built for one of his wives, who was homesick for the mountains. The Greeks considered the Hanging Gardens one of the Seven Wonders of the World. There had never been a city to equal Babylon in grandeur and few to this day!

An official census taken about 900 years B.C. revealed that the Babylonians worshiped about 65,000 gods! Ishtar was one of those gods. She was sometimes presented as a bisexual deity and sometimes as a nude, offering herself as a willing sexual object to her subjects who called her "The Virgin," "The Virgin Mother," and "The Holy Virgin." "Virgin" only meant that she had not been soiled by marriage! None of the hundreds of gods could give any assurances of life after death! The Babylonian citizen could not trust his gods beyond the grave! And those gods did not produce pure, decent, or magnanimous living. Such worship produced correct ritual rather than a good life.⁵

The wickedness was so bad that even Alexander the Great, who was an adulterous and bisexual drunk (who died drunk in the palace of Nebuchadnezzar) was shocked by the wickedness of the city!⁶ Herodotus reveals that every native woman in Babylon was required, once in her life, to go to the Temple of Venus and have sexual intercourse with a stranger! Wealthy women (attended by many maids and eunuchs) would ride up to the Temple in luxury carriages, enter the Temple, and wait for a stranger to throw a piece of silver (of any value) into her lap. She could not refuse anyone for any reason. The two would then go off together in or outside the Temple for their tryst. At the conclusion of the liaison, she would enter her carriage and return home, having obeyed the law and satisfied Venus.⁷ She had satisfied the law and could not be required to participate any further in the one-time prostitution. Such was the status of women in Babylon.

Herodotus also reveals that when Babylon was besieged it was common for the men to strangle their wives to keep them from eating the stored provisions.⁸ After all, a man can't fight if he is hungry! Such wickedness was followed by even more in the form of effeminate degeneracy. Young men dyed and curled their hair, wore perfume and rouge, wore necklaces, bangles, earrings and pendants.⁹ (We're on our way!) After Babylon was conquered by the Persians, it got even worse when women of every class thought it only courtesy to reveal their bodies to as many men as possible. Herodotus even said that "every man of the people, in his poverty prostituted his daughters for money."¹⁰

Durant's summation is appropriate to the U.S. as we face the greatest challenge of our history. He wrote: "Morals grew lax when the temples grew rich; and the citizens of Babylon, wedded to delight, bore with equanimity the subjection of their city by the Kassites, the Assyrians, the Persians, and the Greeks."¹¹

Is that the danger Americans face? Have we grown lax in our wealth, good times, easy living, depending on our missiles, bombs, and planes to protect us? Will we calmly, dispassionately permit our society, our culture to be taken over by a foreign element that uses undisguised threats to accomplish their desires? Others appeal to our sense of fairness and assure us that Muslims are not interested in capturing our nation. Should we believe them? At least, should we not inquire deeply into what they believe to assure ourselves that they not part of the Trojan Horse Project?

Chapter Four

The Monsters Scheming While we Sleep!

The Muslims who steered the planes into the Twin Towers and the Pentagon have often been called "cowards," but cowards don't study, work, and train for years to carry out an act that results in their deaths. These terrorists are highly motivated followers of their religion. It is not wise to mischaracterize an enemy nor is it necessary. If we make him less than he is, then we can not effectively deal with his desire to do us harm. Giving credit for a minor attribute does not condone his major activity. Why put ourselves at a disadvantage in this battle for our very lives? In fact, it is possible to even look at their motives and grievances; after all there could be some truth to them. However, that never justifies killing innocent people. But it does help explain the reason.

I have sought for a descriptive word for the terrorists and "monster" seems very appropriate. There were many examples of such monstrous acts and attitudes following the September 11 attack. Notice the following vicious statements and headlines by leading Muslims:

Chapter Five

The Movement Loot, Land and Ladies

President Bush told Muslims at a Washington area mosque: "The face of terror is not the true face of Islam," and he told a Joint Session of Congress: "Its teachings are good and peaceful, and those who commit evil in the name of Allah blaspheme the name of Allah.” Is that true or not? If it is not true, then Christians are obligated to reprove, rebuke and correct the error, even error coming from the President! After all, he is only the President of the United States, not a member of the Trinity!

Our government will not admit that we are involved in a clash of cultures, and a religious war that could last a hundred years! Authorities get very uneasy around committed Christians who declare that there is one genuine, authentic, reliable religion that is totally different from all other religions. That is breaking the first rule of multiculturalism, and they must never do that. And it is a fact that our government is much more fearful of Muslims than they are of Christians. For once, they made a correct assessment.

Christians must not give anyone a reason to mistreat others. We are obligated to truth, not error. And Americans can discuss, debate and disagree on any issue without fear. While there are many Muslims who are embarrassed and horrified at the terrorism that took place on September 11, we must not permit them to distort facts, the facts about the Koran, to make Muslims more comfortable. In this chapter I will provide documented facts as to the real face of Islam and the real Mohammed.

First, we need to examine some facts about Mohammed, the founder of Islam. Mohammed is the most common name in the world!¹ And note that his name is spelled various ways. It is the same man. He was born in Mecca (Saudi Arabia) in 570 of the Quraysh tribe to Abdullah (Abd-Allah) and Aminah. He was distantly related to the royal family; however, his parents were poor. After the death of his parents, Mohammed was passed among different wealthy relatives and was finally reared by a poor uncle.

Mohammed had visions even as a youngster, and some historians think they were epileptic seizures. Muslims get indignant when this is suggested, but he had the symptoms of epilepsy: he fell to the ground, foaming at the mouth, throwing his head from side-to-side, his eyes rolling back in his head, his body jerking with massive perspiration. Sometimes, he would hear bells. I’m not sure what he had, but I sure don’t want it, and it sounds like epilepsy to me. During these episodes Mohammed received his visions. McClintock and Strong’s encyclopedia reveals: “Muhammad, as we gather from the oldest and most trust-worthy narratives, was an epileptic, and as such, was considered to be possessed of evil spirits.”² Canton also says Mohammed “was given to epileptic fits...” Whether or not he was epileptic is not relevant, and Muslims have every right to disagree with such an assessment.

Mohammed’s problem may have been demon possession. Vol. 4, nos. 400, 490 of the Hadith (one of Islam’s holy books) reveal that he was bewitched, at times seeing things under satanic inspiration. In fact, at one point that’s what he thought his problem was, and he decided to commit suicide when he had another seizure. His family convinced him that he was not possessed because he was such a “good” person; however, we do know that his mother claimed to be visited by spirits, had visions, and was involved in the occult arts. Mohammed could have been epileptic or demon possessed! Or, it could have been both! If I had my choice, I would rather be an epileptic than demon-possessed. I mean no disrespect to sincere Muslims, but I am not going to “waltz around the issue” just to make them more comfortable with their religion. Just as I will stand with Christ and His preaching, His person, and His program of world evangelism, the Muslims must stand with Mohammed’s deception, demonism, debauchery, and depravity.

Chapter Six

The Mistakes Mistakes, Mishmash and Madness

Muslims claim that the Koran is a holy book sent from Allah to Mohammed through various visions. They claim that it has been preserved exactly as it was revealed to the prophet with no corrections, additions or subtractions, and that it is pure Arabic. If so, I demand to know how the Arabic in the Koran is the vocabulary and dialect of a member of the Quraysh tribe living in or near Mecca during the seventh century!¹ Is it unkind to suggest that the Koran came from Mohammed's fevered mind, not the mind of an all powerful, all knowing God? In this chapter we will deal with the many mistakes in the "holy" books of Islam and their many contradictions and some comparisons with the Bible.

If the Koran is from God then it must be perfect, without contradictions. Now, we must admit that there is a difference in confusion and contradictions. So I will try to be fair, honest, and candid in this chapter dealing with mistakes in the Koran, the Hadith (their second holy book) and Islam in general.

After reading all of the Koran and studying many of its passages, I have found numerous errors of historical fact, scientific fact and scriptural fact. It must be remembered that sura locations will vary with each translation. The desired verse may be a few verses before or after the given location. We are told that Mohammed did no miracles in sura 17:90-96 and 29:49 as the latter reveals: "Signs are in the power of God alone. I am only a plain spoken warner." While Mohammed did not perform miracles according to the Koran, we know that Christ did according to the New Testament and according to sura 2:254: "And to Jesus the son of Mary We gave manifest signs...."

Herein is a contradiction because while the Koran tells us Mohammed did not perform miracles, the Hadith reveals many of his miracles: healing the sick, feeding a thousand people from one kid, etc. Which is it? Did he or did he not perform miracles? A few hundred years after Mohammed died, his followers were faced by Christians who spoke of Christ's miracles. So they replied, "Well, Mohammed also performed miracles," Then they proceeded to write hadiths that revealed miracles performed by Mohammed!

Following are some of the miracles allegedly performed by Mohammed: Vol. 4, no. 779 tells that as Mohammed ate food, the food shouted praises to Allah and the Prophet! When he multiplied the bread, he had the people come in groups of ten just as Someone else did! (Christ, in Luke 9 had them sit down in groups of fifty.) Mohammed healed a man with eye trouble by spitting in his eyes according to vol. 4, no. 192 and vol. 5, no. 51; Hadiths no. 641 and 642, vol. 7 reveal that Mohammed could heal all kinds of diseases with his spit. Holy spit! In fact, vol. 4, no. 777 and vol. 5, nos. 471, 472 reveal that his spit filled a well and satisfied 1400 men and their camels! The Hadith tells us that Mohammed's spit, quoting the Koran and waving his hand over a wound healed all kinds of illnesses including scorpion stings and snake bites. There is power in spit!

Gabriel opened Mohammed's chest and washed his insides then took wisdom and faith and poured them into his chest (vol. 1, no. 345). I'm not sure whether Gabriel or an assistant closed.

Mohammed cursed the tribes of Mudar because they rejected him and within a year they were eating hides and dead animals. Another time he prayed for rain, and it rained! How about that?

When Mohammed was asked to perform a miracle to prove he was a true prophet, he pulled his sword and cut the moon in half according to Hadith vol. 4, nos. 830-832; vol. 5, nos. 208-211 and vol. 6, nos. 387-390. Desert Arabs thought the moon and sun were about the size of a basketball! When Muslims needed water, Mohammed rode to the rescue. He called for a bowl and water flowed from his fingertips into the bowl until everyone had his or her thirst quenched (vol. 1, nos. 170, 194; vol. 4, nos. 773-779). How many people were satisfied? Well, it depends on which hadith you read! Vol. 4, no. 774 says it was 70; vol. 4, no. 775 gives 80, then vol. 4, no. 772 says it was 300, but vol. 4, no. 776 and vol. 5, no. 473 give 1500. Well, you don't expect a holy book to be exact in every respect do you?

Chapter Seven

The Motives

Holy Hatred of Christians

Television pundits have been talking incessantly about terrorism, but few are talking about motives. So I will. What could make people hate America so much that they would fly a plane into a building and kill themselves and innocent people? First of all, many of them don't hate Americans but they hate our Government. There is a difference, you know. But why don't they hate other governments as they do ours? You will note that there is little terrorism taking place in other major cities except against American buildings. Most countries usually don't meddle in the affairs of other nations. (Muslims do have some hatred toward Americans because of our "corrupting influence" of their culture.)

Following the September 11 disasters, a militant Islamic group in Pakistan held up a sign that was flashed all over the earth: AMERICANS, THINK! WHY YOU ARE HATED ALL OVER THE WORLD. Inquiring minds want to know the answer.

Many Muslims all over the world have been anti-American for fifty years because they perceive us as the supporter, sustainer, and supplier of Israel. They consider Saudi Arabia holy ground since it is the land of Mohammed and is the location of their major mosque is Mecca. The foreign troops (infidels) stationed in Saudi Arabia inflames them further. Muslims, in general, have hated the West for hundreds of years because of the Crusades and for sundry other reasons.

The Crusades were also one of the most unnecessary events in history. The Muslims were harassing Christian pilgrims in the Holy City and on their travel route; that distressing news disturbed the Roman pontiff. When the timid emperor, Alexius Comnenus, thought Constantinople might fall, he appealed for help to none other than the Pope himself. Pope Urban was ready and willing to commit to a crusade. Urban, the Roman Catholic pope thought his help in defending the Eastern Empire in Constantinople might ingratiate himself to the Greek Orthodox Patriarch and at the same time take the city of Jerusalem from the infidels. A crusade would become a unifying cause for all "Christians." How could he lose? It was a win-win situation. His attempt to help the top honcho in Constantinople would also strengthen the Pope's weak position.

The Roman Pope was "heartbroken" over the church split in 1054 and thought his calling for a crusade against the Turks would establish his long time claim as Pope of all "Christians" in the East and West. He would show that Greek

Patriarch a thing or two with a trek into the heart of Muslim world with his army of “Christians.” (And no doubt there were some Christians in the crowd.)

It was in 1095 that Urban called a council in central France and urged all his bishops and abbots to bring their respective secular lords and knights to the meeting. Urban touched all their “buttons” during his sermon. He described the Holy City and Holy Sepulchre in infidel hands. He talked of the land of “milk and honey” and of craving out their own kingdoms in the Holy Land. He promised that the families of those who “took up the cross” would be protected and debts would be suspended during the crusade. Finally, he took a page out of Mohammed’s book when he promised plenary indulgence for their sins! Heaven for martyrdom! If they lived, they would be little kings in the Holy Land. If they died, they would go straight to Heaven. The only thing missing was 70 virgins waiting for each crusader!

Witnesses report that the crowd yelled, “God wishes it. God wishes it.” And a cardinal fell to his knees in convulsive trembling. (It must have been a very effective sermon!) Prominent lords and common people rushed forward “at the invitation” to take up the cross. They grabbed red cloth and cut crosses and sewed them on the fronts of their tunics. All over Europe “Christians” made plans to “take up the cross” to do battle with the hated Muslims.

The First (of eight) Crusades was the only one that could be called a success. And it was successful not because of the fighting ability of the Crusaders but because the Muslims had been getting weaker for many years. As the Crusaders advanced toward Jerusalem, they killed 8,000 Jews in their trek through the Rhineland, after all the Jews are unbelievers too. After battles along the way, they finally took Jerusalem and quickly slaughtered 70,000 civilians in cold blood!

There were eight major crusades to free Jerusalem from the pagan Muslims, and all were disgraceful, laying a foundation for Muslim hatred of all things “Christian.”

Chapter Eight

The Menace Diseased, Damaged and Dead!

If civilized people do very wicked, harmful things in time of war, what can we expect the bad guys to do? U.S. General George Patton told his troops that their mission was not to go out and die for their country, but to make the enemy go and die for his country! (Cleaned up version!) He was saying that war is an all-out effort to win. He was also saying that the purpose of war was to win, to advance your nation’s cause. And many believe it should be done at any cost. However, that can be debated by decent, reasonable people.

Did you know that the British government manufactured 5,000,000 cakes loaded with anthrax bacteria to be fed to German cows during World War II? The Sunday Herald¹ of London reported on “Operation Vegetarian” that was to wipe out the German beef and dairy herds with the possibility of killing “perhaps even millions” of German innocents. Why didn’t the English do it? Because the Allied success on the battlefields made it unnecessary. But the plan was in the works—to kill innocent civilians with anthrax! Could mass killing like that happen in the U.S.? Such a thought would have been unthinkable until September 11. U.S. authorities are now telling us that it is a good possibility, while others say, “It will happen here." Are we ready?

We already have other examples of terror during time of war. During the French and Indian War, in 1763, the British infected the Indians with smallpox by giving them blankets and handkerchiefs taken from infected patients. Approximately 95% of the Indians that were exposed died of the disease. During the Middle Ages, infected bodies of the enemy were dropped into wells especially in dry, desert areas.

Most people think that the American government is protecting us against all threats, domestic and foreign. So we can sleep in peace. That is not true. An "innocent one" says, "but the U.S. is guarding our borders to protect us." Say what? Our borders are leaking like a sieve, and the U.S. isn't even guarding shipments of highly classified and dangerous weapons across the country! "Yes," says another innocent one, "but they are careful about goods and material that enter the country." Afraid not, but they do catch a few by accident!

Chapter Nine

The Message A Watchdog that Will Bark and Bite!

A message must be sent to the terrorists worldwide, and the message must be clear, unambiguous, loud, and uncompromising: The U.S. will not be bullied or permit its citizens to be killed and others to be threatened into seclusion by any terrorist state, cultic religion, or extremist hate group.

When foreigners visit national monuments, they can see numerous references to the God of the Bible and what our founders believed. We are told that one culture or religion is just as good as another. The 300 members of a stone age culture with all its barbarism, brutality, and backwardness is just as viable as our modern, urbane, sophisticated society with elevators, airplanes, automobiles, hospitals, MRI machines, computers, etc., Likewise, the voodoo cultures practicing witchcraft, shamanism, demonism, pantheism, etc. are as acceptable and on par with Christianity! "After all," we are told, "there is strength in diversity." However, history proves the opposite: There is strength in unity!

Blqck Muslims, Sunni Muslims, Hindus, and others should take off their robes and turbans and assimilate as many Muslims are doing. We must stop calling people Arab-Americans, Afro-Americans, Jewish-Americans, etc. Why not simply be "Americans"? It doesn't mean one cannot appreciate some of the good things that were left in the old country, but if one is in a new country, he should love it, and never be ashamed to profess it.

Many Muslims have identified with the terrorists and have told journalists and pollsters that Americans are anti-Muslim! Well, for goodness sake what did they expect. Are Americans expected to be pro-Muslim when they, for the most part, don't speak our language, dress in sixth century desert clothing, treat women like possessions, and seem to look for opportunities to criticize the nation that has opened its arms to them? They seem to be determined to change America to be like the country they left!

I am tired of immigrates who demand that we be so sensitive to their feelings when they don't give a flip about ours. We have our own language, lifestyle, culture, music (such as it is), and I am weary of foreigners who enjoy all the many benefits of our nation and are not sensitive to our feelings. In the name of multiculturalism and non-discrimination, we opened our collective arms and invited anyone and everyone to our shores with no questions asked and no obligations required. We have been fools and have watched our enemy drag a Trojan Horse into our nation.

If immigrants are offended when I sing patriotic songs, fly the American flag, and pray to Christ, then tough luck. This is a big world so they can find someplace else in which to live. There is plenty of empty space on the Arabian Desert!

I think my grandchildren have a right to live in a nation similar to what I grew up in. I don't want to see our culture changed to that of the sixth or seventh century Arabian Desert.

Epilogue

What Kind of America do you Want?

There is no doubt that I have been misunderstood by many people reading these pages; however, that was not my intent. Yes, I have used sarcasm and have been forceful at times in presenting my position, but difficult times demand strong and decisive action. I am firmly convinced (as I hope you are by now) that we are in a war. It is a clash of cultures and of religions, and even though we don't like religious wars, they do happen. We must remember that this war was not of our making. A large host of Muslims decided on this war. And war it is. It started even before September 11, 2001.

If the U.S. and the "forces of freedom" are to win, then we must be dauntless, decisive, and determined. We must understand, if we have not already, that our world has changed forever. We will not be able to remove all Muslims from our country, and we should not remove those who are sincere, hardworking, assimilating Americans. But those who aid and abet terrorists are the enemy, even if they deplore extreme activities. Honest, kind, gracious Muslims must understand that if they are not for us, they are against us.

Whether we like it or not and whether politicians recognize it or not, we are in a war between Christ and Mohammed. And Christ will win.

Christians must win the Muslims to Christ as they seek to win America to Islam! Maybe if we had been more aggressive in telling them the good news, we might not have the terror we have today. We must tell them that the bad news has a cure, and it is Christ. Everyone must hear the bad news, that all of us are sinners, but the good news is that there is a remedy for the bad news. It is faith in Christ. We will win them if we go after them in unreserved, unselfish, and unconditional love, telling them that repentance of sin and placing simple faith in Christ, will produce the New Birth that Jesus said is the requirement to enter Heaven. Even those terrorists inside the Trojan Horse can have that life-changing, eternity-deciding experience. Let's get to it!

Jesus Christ is still the hope, the only hope for this world!
